The Constitution of India is the world's lengthiest written constitution with 395 articles and 8 schedules. It was passed on 26 Nov 1949 by the 'The Constituent Assembly' and is fully applicable since 26 Jan 1950. It embodies some Fundamental Rights which are similar to the Bill of Rights declared by the United States constitution. It also borrows the concept of a Supreme Court from the US. India is a federal system in which residual powers of legislation remain with the central government, similar to that in Canada. The constitution provides detailed lists dividing up powers between central and state governments as in Australia, and it elaborates a set of Directive Principles of State Policy as does the Irish constitution. The constitution has provision for Schedules to be added to the constitution by amendment. A review of the constitution needs at least two-thirds of the Lok Sabha and Rajya Sabha to pass it. The Indian constitution is one of the most frequently amended constitutions in the world.

Answer ALL Questions

28. Read the passage carefully and answer questions following it.

Elections in India are the largest democratic electoral exercise in the world. Results of these elections are followed closely as they have a direct bearing on the lives of the country's over 1.3 billion population. The government of India is based on Federalism. There are 3 levels where elected officials can be appointed: state, federal and local levels. Election Commission of India is the apex body which oversees all the matters related to elections. The Parliament of India has 2 houses: Lok Sabha and Rajya Sabha. The members of Lok Sabha elect the Prime Minister of the country. It is also known as lower house. And comprises a total of 552 members. From states, 530 members are selected, while 20 members in the Lok

Sabha represent the union territories. Two of the members are chosen from the Anglo Indian community by the President. The members of the Lok Sabha are elected every 5 years. Earlier, in 1952, there were a total of 1874 candidates contesting for seats in the Lok Sabha. The number of candidates vying for the seat rose to 13952 in 1996 and in 2009, there were 8070 candidates. For the 2014 Lok Sabha elections, the expenditure was about Rs 37.5 crore. The election was conducted in a total of 9 stages. The cost per voter was estimated to be Rs 17. Votes were cast using EVMs (Electronic Voting Machines). In the 2014 general elections, BJP-led NDA (National Democratic Alliance) secured 282 seats and rose to power. Narendra Modi then became the Prime Minister of India. While Lok Sabha is called the lower house, the upper house of Parliament is called Rajya Sabha. It consists of 250 members which are elected from states' legislative assemblies and the Electoral College of Union Territories. The tenure for the Rajya Sabha is 6 years and comprises 238 members. After two years, one-third of the members retire. Twelve members from different fields, like scientists, artists, sports personality, journalists, businessmen, jurists and more, are also nominated.

29. a. Read the following passage and draw a flowchart for the process discussed.

After cocoa trees are planted, it takes three to five years of care before the first yield is produced. The trees produce pods throughout the year, with large harvests typically occurring twice annually. When the crop is ready, farmers harvest the pods by cutting them from the trees and opening them to release the cocoa seeds inside. This process is done manually, as the use of machines may harm the plants and diminish the crop. Once the seeds are collected, they are laid out in large trays and covered with banana leaves to ferment. Fermentation can take anywhere from three to nine days, during which time the seeds turn a dark brown and the flavor develops. Once the seeds are dry, they are packed into burlap sacks and transported to facilities where they are inspected by buyers, purchased, and shipped to factories. Once the beans have reached the processing facility, they are cleaned, inspected, and then sorted for quality control. Beans that pass inspection are roasted in large cylinders to improve their color and flavor. The length of time required for roasting depends on the specific type of bean used and the desired end result. When roasting is complete, the shell of the bean is removed using a winnowing machine, and the cocoa nibs are exposed. Processors ground the cocoa nibs into a thick liquid called cocoa liquor, or chocolate liquor. The cocoa liquor is pressed to extract cocoa butter, which is later used to make chocolate. The solid cocoa left behind after pressing is pulverized into cocoa powder.
